

A woman of the sea.

“Now a new stage of my life begins where one of the most difficult situations that I will have to get used to is leaving the port that little by little became my second home and my co-workers became friends that I will never forget,” they said. The almost final words of a farewell made by our Daysi Soto López.

She is leaving us to live a new stage, far from what she calls family and from the port, but she will do so accompanied by the family that supported Daysi so that she could work for 38 years in the space that constitutes the first image of Cuba to the world when she boats it is about.

The SEPOC Company is grateful for its loyalty, commitment and sense of belonging. Without women like her, who make a difference in the history of a company and a country, Cuba would not be the same.

Our best wishes for success in your new projects. Good sea!
